allGeo for ADP Workforce Now®

Time and attendance for field services

allGeo Time Clock helps field service businesses by enabling field workers to use their smartphones to clock in and out of job sites while providing managers with a dashboard to plan, visualize, monitor and analyze their field operations in real time.

allGeo Time Clock is part of the enterprise-grade allGeo platform that spans all areas of the field service workflow including scheduling and dispatch, monitoring and delivery, and measurement and reporting. With allGeo's low-code/low-IT platform, field service businesses can significantly reduce payroll and operations costs while improving productivity and accountability.

Accurately measure employee time and attendance.

Keep track of your field employees' locations with allGeo's geofencing technology. Get alerts when employees reach their assigned job site or travel outside of it or are running late, enabling you to measure the exact amount of time employees spend at their assigned job sites during work hours. Monitoring is automatically turned off after work hours based on company policies and schedule, ensuring employee privacy.

Optimize routes and measure mileage.

Using allGeo, managers can plan the best route for their field employees and dispatch assignments to the employee's app. During shift hours, the system automatically computes mileage, freeing the field employee from manually tracking miles to focus on the most important aspect of their job: customer service.

Customize your reporting to fit your business needs.

With allGeo, you can track time against tasks, jobs and customers to help estimate labor and job costing. You can also run scheduled and on-demand reports based on employee groups, customers, workorders / jobs and more. Overtime and double overtime configurations can be customized to help manage payroll. Reports can be exported in various formats or integrated with ADP Workforce Now® using allGeo's ADP® connector.
